

Guidance Note 13

Compliance Reporting

- This Guidance Note provides information on:
 - circumstances where foreign persons (referred to in this Guidance Note as foreign investors) must report on their compliance with conditions;
 - the different types of reports that may be required;
 - how a compliance report should be prepared; and
 - meeting obligations under independent audit reporting conditions (including the circumstances in which they may be applied).
- Under section 74 of the Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act 1975 (the Act), the Treasurer may decide that the Commonwealth has no objection to certain foreign investments (defined in the Act as ‘significant actions’, ‘notifiable national security actions’ or ‘reviewable national security actions’), subject to one or more conditions being imposed that the Treasurer is satisfied are necessary to ensure the action will not be contrary to the national interest (or national security, as the case requires).
 - Exemption certificates issued under the Act may also include conditions that a foreign investor must comply with.
- Generally, if conditions are imposed, these may also include requirements to periodically report on compliance with the conditions imposed.
- A foreign investor’s specific compliance reporting obligations are set out in the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate issued to them.
 - These reporting conditions may require an officer of the investor to certify the investor’s compliance with the conditions (compliance reports) or require that an independent audit regarding compliance with the conditions be carried out periodically (independent audit reports), and submit these reports to Treasury. Exemption certificates issued under the Act also may include independent audit conditions.
- A template for preparing compliance reports that can be used by investors is shown at Attachment A of this guidance note.
- The information provided in this guidance note is general advice only, and should be read in conjunction with the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate.

Note

Foreign investors who take an action specified in a no objection notification or exemption certificate on or after 1 July 2023 will generally have notification obligations in relation to the Registrar of the Register of Foreign Ownership of Australian Assets instead of to the Treasurer. For more information, see the Register of Foreign Ownership of Australian Assets Guidance Note and Transitional Guide.

In some cases, Treasury will not take compliance action against a foreign investor who fails to notify the Treasurer or Treasury of a proposed event or action described under a no objection notification or exemption certificate but who instead gives a register notice in relation to the same event. For more information, see the Register of Foreign Ownership of Australian Assets Guidance Note.

A: Why do you need to report on your compliance?

Reporting by foreign investors provides Treasury with the information it requires for monitoring investors' compliance with the conditions of their foreign investment approvals and for targeting its compliance activities as necessary. It provides an avenue for foreign investors to continuously engage with Treasury on compliance issues, including potential instances of non-compliance and remediation activities. Reporting is an important part of Treasury's monitoring, audit and investigation activities, both in relation to non-compliance disclosed in a report and assessing the veracity of reports that attest to be fully compliant.

B: Types of compliance reports

Whilst a foreign investor should rely on the specific reporting obligations set out in the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate, the list below provides several of the categories of reporting obligations:

- Notifications about when proposed actions or transactions occur.
- Reporting on acquisitions made under an exemption certificate¹.
- Periodic reporting on compliance with tax and other conditions.
- Reporting on breaches of conditions.
- Reporting on remedial actions where a compliance issue has arisen.

This is not an exhaustive list, and in some cases, conditions may require a foreign investor to provide a bespoke report. Each type of report requires a different set of information, and a foreign investor may be required to submit more than one type of report for the same investment. Foreign investors should review all requirements in a no objection notification or exemption certificate to ensure that they comply with the requirements.

C: How should a compliance report be prepared?

A report should be prepared in accordance with the conditions set out in the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate (including those that have been subject to a variation).

Each type of report requires different information to be included, and there is no prescribed form or template for most reports unless otherwise provided in the condition.

The Commonwealth is likely to consider the following factors in considering whether reports that have been prepared fulfil the relevant conditions:

- Timeliness including with reference to tax reporting dates and accounting periods.
- Who prepares and signs off on the report, and their role(s) in relation to the foreign investor (for example, CEO or other officer of the investor, or Commonwealth approved independent auditor).

¹ For a no objection notification or exemption certificate given on or after 1 January 2021, an investor must report on these matters as specified on the Foreign Investment website.

- Accurate, factual and complete information. Treasury may, by way of written notice, require a foreign investor to provide information and documents to demonstrate how they have complied with their conditions, including enquiries made and evidence to inform their compliance reporting.
- Quality, depth and relevance of information and evidence provided.

D: Timeliness

Reports, including notifications of acquisitions, should be submitted by the date specified in the conditions and through the Foreign Investment Portal. Foreign investors should note that this requirement applies to conditions that specify that reports should be submitted through email—the new Foreign Investment Portal has replaced the email mechanism. If the conditions are silent on the mechanism to submit the report, please submit the compliance report through the Foreign Investment Portal.

The reporting period set out in the conditions should be adhered to. Where it is not clear when a compliance report is due, the generally acceptable practice is that it should be submitted as soon as practicable following the end of the reporting period or triggering event (for example, the completion of an acquisition). Significant penalties (including infringement notices, civil and criminal penalties) may apply for breaches of the law.

If there is a compelling commercial reason for varying the timing of the reporting period or when a specific report is due, foreign investors should contact Treasury as early as possible through the Foreign Investment Portal mailbox. Treasury will seek to work with foreign investors to support them in achieving compliance.

Tax reporting dates and accounting periods

If a foreign investor does not have tax obligations in Australia, then they should submit their report to the ATO when the Australian target entity (if relevant) submits its tax returns.

If a foreign investor has tax obligations in Australia, then they should provide their tax conditions compliance report at the same time that they submit their annual tax return to the ATO. In preparing their report, they should use the accounting period of the standard Australian financial year (1 July to 30 June) or a substituted accounting period as approved by the ATO. For more information on substituted accounting periods, please see the ATO website.

For further information on reporting under tax conditions please see below.

E: Who prepares and signs off on the report and their role(s) in relation to the investor

An investor's conditions will generally state what is considered an appropriate level of assurance for a report (for example, that the compliance report is to be signed by the chief executive officer of the foreign investor, or the independent audit report is to be signed by the appointed lead auditor of the independent audit firm engaged by the foreign investor to perform the audit and prepare the audit report). If not specified, assurance should generally be provided by an officer² of the investor. The compliance report should specify that the assurance was given on the basis of reasonable enquiries made by the person signing it, and should detail any elements of material non-compliance with the relevant conditions. The person signing off the compliance report should be able to explain, if asked, the processes undertaken and evidence examined to enable them to provide their assurance. It is generally not appropriate for a legal or other adviser of the investor to sign the compliance report.

If investors remain in doubt about who should sign off on a compliance report or an independent audit report, they should contact Treasury through the Foreign Investment Portal mailbox.

F: Accurate, factual and complete information

It is important to provide information that is accurate, factual and complete. The report, whether it is a compliance report or an independent audit report, should provide appropriate assurance of this.

The information provided should not have significant gaps, it should present facts that can be verified if needed, and it should be sufficiently complete that it can be used to make informed decisions about the foreign investor's degree of compliance.

Investors should be aware that it is an offence under Part 7.4 of the Criminal Code to provide false or misleading information or documents to a Commonwealth officer or entity, or in compliance or purported compliance with a law of the Commonwealth.

G: Quality, depth and relevance of information and evidence provided

Reports should be prepared in accordance with the relevant conditions. All reports should contain necessary details so that it is clear who the investor is, what the action (that is, the relevant investment) is that has been taken, which conditions are being complied with, and who is the person responsible for providing assurance of compliance. Such details may include, but are not limited to:

- the name of the foreign investor and the file numbers relevant to the application;
- the name and authority of the person/s signing off on the report;
- the date by which the report was required to be submitted;
- the dates the action/s were approved, and the dates they were completed;
- the other parties to the action/transaction; and
- the name of the entity/entities performing the action, its ultimate owner/s, and the executive officer/s with ultimate responsibility for the action and for complying with the conditions (including the requirement to prepare and submit the report).

H: Reporting under tax conditions

The reporting template provided at Attachment A can also be used by investors that are required to report to Treasury annually on compliance with tax conditions. The report may be modified to suit particular circumstances.

The report should be signed off by an officer of the investor.

I: Reporting on independent audit conditions

Independent audit conditions, under which investors must engage an independent audit firm to audit their compliance with conditions, provide an additional level of assurance where more visibility of compliance with conditions is required. These conditions generally require that the Commonwealth approve the identity of the audit firm, the audit team nominated by the audit firm and the scope of the audit. Conditions allow an investor to engage an independent professional advisory firm with appropriate technical skills (in addition to, or instead of, an independent audit firm (Relevant Expert)) to prepare an audit report in accordance with relevant Australian audit standards issued by the Auditing and Assurance Standards Board.

The decision maker may be more likely to impose an independent audit condition in relation to investments which are of a higher value or where the assessed risk to the national interest (or national security, as the case requires) is higher, such as investments involving sensitive sectors of the economy.

The audit must be carried out at the cost of the entity to which it relates.

The first audit will be for the period commencing from the date the action described in the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate is taken. Therefore, it is important that foreign investors comply with their audit conditions from this date.

Factors the Commonwealth is likely to consider in determining whether to approve a particular audit firm and/or relevant expert undertaking audit work

Amongst other factors, the Commonwealth is likely to consider the following in determining whether to approve an audit firm (and/or Relevant Expert, if applicable) undertaking audit work:

- 1) Depth and quality of the pool of people dedicated to the audit, including relevant experience of the firm and individual team members, as well as the level of commitment of people supporting the audit. The proposed team members' experience in undertaking similar work in Australian regulated entities is also a relevant factor. For example, where data and/or cybersecurity conditions have been imposed on the foreign investor, the audit team must hold relevant qualifications and expertise to be able to assess, test and sample (as needed) in order to make evidence-based findings and conclusions as to the foreign investor's compliance with conditions.
- 2) Absence of any existing or potential conflicts of interest (including a robust process to ensure this is the case), and the approach to identifying, reporting and managing any potential conflicts of interest during the course of the audit. Investors and their proposed auditors are encouraged to consider the impact of prior engagements and may be asked for further information relating to them (Treasury would generally expect that any prior internal or external auditing engagements with both the investors and the target entities are noted in the submitted audit proposal).
- 3) Where relevant, capacity and expertise to assess and advise on potential physical security and system security (including cybersecurity) issues. A summary of previous security analysis roles undertaken within Australian or global companies would be useful in this regard.
- 4) Knowledge and understanding of the relevant industry. The investor should, to the best of its ability, provide information on the work that the proposed audit firm (and/or Relevant Expert, as applicable) has undertaken in the relevant sector over the last five years.
- 5) Understanding of governance.

- 6) Understanding of the technical, commercial, policy and regulatory issues.
- 7) Staff with appropriate security clearances (where applicable and relevant).

It is important to note that it is a requirement the audit be conducted independently. While the Commonwealth must be able to rely on the content of the audit report and may make enquiries, and require the foreign investor or audit firm provide information and/or records to check the accuracy of the audit report findings, it will not be party to the audit.

It is open to an investor to propose different firms to undertake different aspects of the required audit, so long as compliance with all relevant conditions is assessed. Such proposals would not be automatically agreed to by the Commonwealth, but agreement will not be unreasonably withheld. We encourage investors to engage with us early in this process. To facilitate approvals in a timely manner, unless otherwise mandated by the conditions, it is recommended that audit firm/auditor proposals are submitted to Treasury for review at least 120 days before the end of the relevant reporting period.

The Commonwealth is unable to provide a list of preferred audit firms, however, investors may wish to contact auditing or other relevant professional associations if they require any assistance in this regard.

The guidance provided above is general guidance and not all criteria will be applicable in all circumstances. It should be read in conjunction with the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate issued to a particular foreign investor.

Factors the Commonwealth is likely to consider in determining whether to approve the scope of works for an audit

Amongst other factors, the Commonwealth would expect that the independent audit proposal for an audit should:

- 1) Outline the level of assurance to be provided, with reference to the Framework for Assurance Engagements issued by the Auditing and Assurance Standards Board. The Commonwealth recommends adopting the ASAE3100 Compliance Engagements for independent audits required under the Act. While the general expectation is for all independent audits to be reasonable assurance engagements, a limited assurance engagement may be appropriate in certain limited circumstances.
- 2) Outline the scope of the audit, including clearly outlining which conditions will be subject to the audit and any proposed exclusions.
- 3) Provide the audit methodology used to assess compliance by the foreign investor named in the relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate, having regard to any requirements specified in the conditions.
- 4) Detail the audit procedures used to assess compliance with conditions. The Commonwealth expects auditors to:
 - review the design and implementation of compliance controls. This includes for example, reviewing not only the policies and procedures, but also reviewing evidence that policies and procedures have been implemented and complied with,
 - test the effectiveness of any/all controls implemented,
 - document their audit findings and draw conclusions on the foreign investor's compliance with each condition imposed for the duration of the audit period, and

- prepare an audit report containing the above information in a suitable format to be submitted to Treasury. Audit firms will adopt a reporting format catered to the specific requirements of the audit and the extent of the work involved to ensure they have sufficiently captured all the information required in the report. They may seek to engage with Treasury on the format before commencing the audit report.
- 5) Specify an appropriate timeframe for completion of the audit and delivery of the audit report.
 - 6) Outline the proposed outcome of the audit, including an assertion about the foreign investor’s compliance or non-compliance with the conditions and where appropriate, recommendations to remediate any deficiencies or risks identified.
 - 7) Indicate whether the audit will be conducted remotely (that is, that auditors would not be required to enter premises) or whether site visits will be required.

Contact between the Commonwealth and the audit firm

In some circumstances, conditions may specify that the Commonwealth can speak directly to the audit firm prior to the commencement of any works. A direct line of communication allows Commonwealth representatives to provide appropriate context to the audit firm.

Attachment A: Compliance report template on foreign investment conditions

This template is not a prescribed form for preparing a compliance report. However, it may be used as guidance for the structure and content of such a report under tax and other reporting conditions (excluding independent audit reporting). The italicised text is to provide further explanation and examples, and should not be left in the compliance report that is submitted.

In relation to any reporting requirements imposed by conditions under a relevant no objection notification or exemption certificate (including independent audit reporting), where a foreign investor has multiple no objection notifications in relation to one transaction or related transactions, the investor may seek Treasury’s consent to prepare a single report. For example, if Investor A is acquiring multiple Australian entities in a corporate group, they may receive a no objection notification for each acquisition. If all of these no objection notifications are subject to the same or similar conditions and have the same reporting obligations, then, subject to Treasury’s consent, the foreign investor may be able to prepare a single report in relation to all of these no objection notifications provided the single report clearly sets out the foreign investor’s compliance with each condition under each no objection notification, including separate findings relevant to their compliance with each conditions in the case of submitting a single independent audit report.
